

GLEANINGS OF GOSSIP.

Where the Politicians Were and
What They Found to Talk
About on Sunday.

The Fertile Brain of Sanders Hatches a New Scheme for the Rumpers.

Me and Power Will Pay Salaries for a Consideration—Some Very Queer Biographical Work.

The peaceful quiet of the Sabbath brought rest to politicians as far as active work was concerned. It was, however, a day of scheming. The rump legislators met in various resorts to devise some plan of relief from their uncomfortable situation. The chill winds that ushered in the day brought reminders that the circuit court room with its easy chairs, comfortable desks and warm atmosphere was an admirable place for legislators to meet. There was a growing feeling among the rumpers that they were outsiders and with this came a longing desire to return to the fold and join their brethren of the "House of Representatives" of the first legislative body of the state of Montana. It was decided to adjourn their sessions in the back room at an early hour each day. This was the result of a general fear that some unfortunate rump might be "held up" in the dark recesses of the alley in the gulch. Some one suggested that Sanders would make these losses good, but the other forlorn rumpers laughed at this idea. Another black sheep thought that Power should act as body guard for them, but Power's failure to break in two oaken doors disposed of this proposition. Altogether it was a blue day for the rump. When they thought of home and the Montana house of representatives, they were forced to whistle to keep the tears back.

The latest production of Sanders' scheming brain was the subject of much gossip during the day. As the matter now stands, the rumpers can draw no salaries. This deprivation renders their already gloomy situation almost unbearable. With the depressing knowledge that they are in the wrong they see no rainbow hues in the prospect of receiving no pay in the schemes to gratify the ambitions of two or three men. Realizing that the absence of funds will have a weakening effect on their men, Sanders and Power are understood to have made an offer to pay the salaries of the rumpers through the auditor. This will go on until two fake United States senators are elected. After this, Sanders and Power will tell their rumpers that the financial pressure is too expensive and that they had better go to the court house and take seats in the house of representatives. Of course Sanders would have no use for the men after the election of the dummy senators. They could then be left to follow the dictates of their conscience. Sanders wants to go to the United States senate, and he will sacrifice all scruples to get there.

The Broadwater was filled with representatives, politicians and visitors yesterday. The rumpers were there to restore their drooping spirits in the great swimming bath and at the bar, and the politicians went down to talk over matters and lay "pipe." Manager McIntyre brought good nature to the guests by providing a dinner of unusual excellence, at least this verdict was expressed by Lieutenant-Governor Rickards, the best natured statesman present. He can afford to keep good natured, for his official position, as far as work goes, is a sinecure. If his persuasive eloquence can induce the senate to get down to business, that distinguished body will receive more attention from the press. Newspaper epicureans were there in numbers. Col. Todd, of the Fort Benton River Press, was seated along with the genial Jerry Collins, of the Great Falls Tribune. Sam Clover, of the Chicago Herald, presided at another table. His value as a gastronomic critic was appreciated by other critics. Among them were Lieutenant Governor Rickards, who claims a place in the fraternity by reason of a former connection with a religious journal. J. H. Monteith, of the Butte Inter Mountain, whose serene temperament is not disturbed by his shaky position on the rump, was there. Col. Rolfe, of the Great Falls Leader, and the Independent man filled out the journalistic list.

The biographies published by our morning contemporary have created no end of fun. Perhaps the most astonishing man of all was Captain P. R. Dolman. "Well, that makes me laugh," he said, referring to the sketch. "Here I am down as arriving in this world in 1864. Why, in 1863 three years before I was born, I was a captain in an Ohio regiment independent for my country. That's getting along in the world pretty fast, isn't it? In 1868 I was a delegate in the convention that nominated Grant for president. I was only four years old then, quite a precocious lad, don't you think so? I guess somebody has been fooling that fellow pretty badly." Harry R. Comly is a veteran representative, but he never knew that he was born in 1841 until he laughed over the interesting date in yesterday's Journal. He wonders why the date was not rendered more impressive by the addition of several more figures.

The leading democrats regret the disposition among his friends to make Mr. Blakey permanent speaker of the house, not that he would not fill the position with admirable dignity and success, but his long experience as a representative and his valuable knowledge of legislative affairs makes his presence as a leader on the floor of the house almost indispensable. He hoped that Mr. Blakey's services will be given to the party where they are most needed. His known ability in the shaping of legislation should be given full freedom in the active work of the house.

No assortment of toys and holiday goods in the city can compare with the display at The Bee Hive.

"Thou Shalt Not." "His Private Character," "Allen's Wife by Haggard," and other leading novels just received at The Bee Hive.

Poor Motor Line Service.
Much complaint was heard yesterday about the wretched irregularity of the motor line. The schedule is not at all lived up to, and during cold weather people object to standing on the street from a quarter to a half hour waiting for the cars. Especially is the complaint made against the evening runs when persons desire to go out to the Broadwater hotel for dinner. Last night one of the trains backed up and down Park avenue at least six times after the passengers waited on Main street fully twenty minutes.

NOTARY SEALS—New ones made and old ones changed. C. E. Kemp, Helena, Mont.

Signor Liberati and His Band.

The attendance at the opera house last night was smaller than that of the preceding nights, though the audience was enthusiastic in its appreciation and applause.

Signor Liberati fairly outdid himself in his rendition of sacred music selections, and every one who attended did not hesitate to say that the performance was the best of the engagement. The company leaves this morning for Bozeman and will be at Miles City to-morrow. Helena theater-goers will be pleased to hear that Signor Liberati will be along this way again next year to fulfill engagements already made for concerts at the Portland exposition, at Tacoma, Seattle and other northwestern cities. While in Portland recently filling a four weeks' engagement at the exposition, he was presented with a beautiful gold medal, containing eleven diamonds, by the directors of the exposition, and received a handsome gold watch from the citizens of the web-foot metropolis.
